Research

Markups and Public Procurement: Evidence from Czech Construction Tenders

First Place, Young Economist of the Year Award, Czech Economic Society, 2025

Public procurement raises firm markups by approximately 15% during contract years, estimated from production data on a 2006–2021 panel of Czech construction firms; the premium declines from roughly 30% in 2006 to 10% in 2021. Master's thesis (Stockholm School of Economics, 2024), developed further as a project during the audit of Industrial Organization II (ECON 601) at Yale, Spring 2026. The replication package is part of the Applied Economics Incubator's production-function collection (University of Chicago, 2026).

Research Positions

Predoctoral Fellow, Tobin Center for Economic Policy, Yale University

2025 – 2027

Research assistant to Prof. Seth Zimmerman and Prof. Barbara Biasi

- For Prof. Zimmerman: a price-theoretic model of school size (a district with a fixed budget trades the gain from smaller schools against the overhead each school carries); data infrastructure for a study of New York City's school-funding reform; an archive of school-board meeting records as a research-ready dataset
- For Prof. Biasi: federal research funding (HERD) linked to university course offerings, with a field crosswalk and exposure measures; a national database of school-district leaders for a survey; teacher contracts; an OCR dataset from American Men & Women of Science; code review of a regression-discontinuity analysis and difference-in-differences diagnostics

Research Assistant, Institute for International Economic Studies (IIES)

2024 – 2025

- Prof. Ingvid Almås: Kizazi Kijacho early-childhood field experiment, 3,600 Tanzanian households: survey data, consumption aggregates, IRT measures of child development; latent-factor modeling with Profs. Orazio Attanasio and Costas Meghir

- Prof. Matěj Bajgar: helped build the Web of Science researcher–publication matched database for IDEA Study 11/2022
